Fells Point Main Street Hires New Executive Director

Fells Point Main Street program gets funding, hires Jason Sullivan to spearhead neighborhood revitalization efforts

Thanks to Fells Point's recent addition as a fully funded member of Baltimore Main Streets Program, the Fells Point Development Corporation has hired Jason Sullivan as Executive Director of the Fells Point Development Corporation, the Main Street program for the greater Fells Point area. "We are thrilled to have Jason on board" stated Board President Jeremy Fennema. "Jason brings an extremely diverse skill set to the table. His work in the Peace Corps and Catholic Relief Services all around the world and his background in heading up economic revitalization programs in depressed boroughs outside of Pittsburgh, as well as the fact that he is fluent in Spanish, makes him the ideal person to run point on our revitalization efforts here in Fells Point."

Mr. Sullivan's experience working with volunteers, fundraising, managing grants and aid in the Peace Corps, World Vision International, and Catholic Relief Services, coupled with his language skills, his ability to reach out to diverse communities and build bridges, and his prior revitalization experience, made him an ideal candidate for the position. Tricia Ellis, a board member of the Fells Point Main Street program and resident of Fells Point says "We are so lucky to have him", a sentiment shared by the entire board.

Currently busy getting himself acclimated to the new position, and working hard on the plans for the upcoming Privateer Day in Fells Point on April 28th, Mr. Sullivan is excited to be working in the diverse and dynamic neighborhood of Fells Point and looks forward to getting to meet all of the businesses owners in all of Fells Point. Make sure you shake his hand and say Hi, when he drops by.
